

Kim Jeffries: You want to get out of bed in the morning and then you don't want to get out of bed in the morning because when your feet touch the floor, it's so painful. I was almost wanting a wheelchair because it hurt that bad to walk.

Kim Jeffries: My name is Kim Jeffries. I'm located in Chicago. Right now, I am disabled so I am not working. Well, I'm a diabetic first then I have some liver issues. What led me to Balanced Flow was probably just the result of the diabetes. The pain was awful enough that something needed to be done. And I said, "It's worth a shot." On the internet, there was some advertisement that I responded to. I filled the form they had online and then someone called me and we scheduled an appointment.

Kim Jeffries: That first appointment was I guess like an assessment. So they were just doing different tests to see, I guess, to what extent the neuropathy was there. The next step was starting the treatments. So we started the treatments I guess the week thereafter. I've been coming to Balanced Flow for about two months. The relief, it actually was pretty soon. It fluctuates a little bit, but there were a few times that I can remember that my feet felt 100% better when I left. For it to be that far advanced and to get some relief was absolutely awesome. My feet, they were quite painful and the pain to lessen so much is a wonderful thing. I would say it is absolutely worth it.
